

Pre-Lesson Comprehension

Target Language: past progressive tense

Focus: In this lesson, you will understand and be able to use the past progressive tense to talk about finished actions in the past.

Read and understand the target language below.

We use the past progressive tense to talk about finished actions in the past. It describes an action that was in progress at a specific time in the past. The structure is: was / were (not) + present participle (verb -ing).

- I was studying all day yesterday. I'm tired!
- He was living in Hawaii for three years.
- They weren't staying with friends in New York.

We use the past progressive to emphasize a temporary action. For example:

- It was raining hard this morning, so I stayed home.
- Lesley was looking for a new computer. Hers broke.
- She wasn't drinking coffee for two weeks.

The past progressive tense also shows a repeated action in the past. For example:

- I was studying every weekend last semester. All of my classes were very hard.
- My daughter was waking up with nightmares for months after she saw a scary movie.
- My husband wasn't speaking English at work until his new boss from America came.

For any question with the past progressive tense, use the following structures:

Closed Questions: was / were + subject + present participle (verb -ing)

Q: Was it raining all day yesterday?

A: Yes, it was (raining).

No, it wasn't (raining).

Open Questions: wh-question + was / were + subject + present participle (verb -ing)
